MITT ARTISTS DEPART

When the good ship Alameda pulled out of the harbor this morning she took with her the last of the fighters, Jack McFadden and Dick Sullivan, who have made their home in Honolulu for the past year or so, were passengers for San Francisco. The snowy slopes and the sunny shores will no more have the glory of housing these knights of the padded mitts.

It was with tears in his eyes that Jack McFadden, the Yellow Kid, walked out of the gang plan. "Really, boys, it is with sorrow that I take my departure from this land of sunshine and three squares per day. I have traveled this wide world over and I must say that this land of sugar cane is the land for me. Just as soon as I have collected enough of the wherewith to settle down, it is me for Aloha land. I may be a fighter and all of that but I certainly know a good people when I see them, and although some of them say that I had a good sized brick in my glove the night I put Sailor Murch away, I am ready to forgive them. Well, just say for me that I am as honest as that old guy 'the honest blacksmith' and I can look any man in the face and not have the gully thought I owe him a board bill. Look up my record as a resident of Honolulu. Yes, the boys have all been good to me here and I wish to thank them for it." Just then the whistle blew and Jack staggered up the plank laden with leis of various hues.

Dick Sullivan, who accompanied Jack, was of a more serious nature as he took his departure. He had a few words to say to how sorry he was to see the boxing game stopped here and hoped that some day it would be resumed, when he would like to come back to Hawaii and box. Sullivan had the following to say of the O'Meara incident: "Poor Dick O'Meara was not himself when he made that statement and was probably sickness and troubles added by the remarks of others that drove him to it. Dick needed money and he took this method to try and squeeze it out of me. Were I millionaire I would let him up in business, but I have nearer ones to help support and only wish to give O'Meara what is due him. While in Honolulu I gave the sporting people the best I had and always fought to win and did so. Had I wanted to have jabbed the people here I could have easily crossed the crowd and made a bunch of coin and got out. This is not my way of doing business. I am ambitious to get to the top of the ladder and will do so if possible. If any one thinks I am such a fool as to pull the padding out of a glove and run the risk of breaking my hands, well I feel sorry for them. Had not the boxing games closed here I would have stayed for many a day and I say again that I am sorry to take my departure. I join with McFadden in thanking the sporting public for the helping hand that they have extended during my stay here."

Sullivan, like McFadden, was covered with leis given to him by many admirers who went to the dock to see the boys off.

Of the trio only O'Meara is left behind to bear the brunt of the boxing scandal and we predict that he will not remain long in these parts. O'Meara probably realizes his mistake and will make his escape at the first opportunity.

Poor old Billy Woods, who was dragged into this mess, will still continue to guard the ladies in stripes and probably wishes that he could put O'Meara with the birds that he watches over. Well, the whole thing will soon be forgotten and the lid has fallen on the boxing game. The only thing left is soccer football, the game of kicking. Fight fans will find little amusement there and any time they go to one of these games they must be backed in so that they do not shy.

Intercollegiate activity has commenced at the two schools, Oahu college and at Kamehameha. Down town the clubs are beginning to talk "socks." To any one unfamiliar with the Association game, which has been substituted for the kick-in-the-rib game of former years, it would appear that the open-air two-step season had just opened. Nowadays at the Makiki lot, loose-muscle athletes can be seen upon the field toying with the pigskin as though it were an egg. They handle the sphere with the delicate touch of a cuneiform violinist. This game no more resembles the other than a sack of dill pickles resembles an automobile. No more the voice of the quarterback breaks in upon the silence of the breathless crowd with an assortment of unmeaning jargon. The signal code is completely absent from the football game. The inventor of the Association must have been poor at arithmetic. A deaf mute has as much chance in this English game as it is played as an eloquent orator.

Although considerable knocking has been indulged in by many who can not get the broken-shoulder-blade tactics out of their systems, the game is bound to become popular with the devotees of the pigskin sport. It is essentially an open game, and the people on the bleachers can follow every move made by the players. Anxious mothers will not have to sit in the grandstand during the play wondering if their darling boys will come home in the morgue wagon. Three-quarters of the crowd at a football game in previous years could not tell what was going on underneath that mass of human hair in the center of the field. They just bluffed themselves into thinking that they knew what was happening. Whenever that mass of humanity on the field would unravel itself to the extent of revealing a single player in the concrete, a mighty shout would resound over the bleachers. You would feel like an expert if you caught sight of the ball during a play.

YALE-HARVARD FOOTBALL

Of all the big teams Yale is probably the heaviest loser, not because the Yale have lost more men, but because of the character of the players themselves. All told, Yale is minus seven of her regular veterans. These include Sherrill and Cates, the two ends; Tripp, the all-American guard; Flanders, the center rush; Hutchinson, quite generally picked as the best quarter-back in the East, and Flinn and Quill, the two men who alternated at full-back. These men are left for the 1936 nucleus: Forbes and Higelow, tackles; Erwin, guard; Morse and Rourke, half-backs. But Yale loses heavily in veterans she at least has a splendid lot of substitutes from which to draw. These include White and Hockenberger, both experienced linemen, and a splendid lot of back-field material in Knox, Tad Jones, Veeder, Devine, Zimowski and Werneck. Yale's coaching this year is in charge of Foster Rockwell, the great quarter-back, though Walter Camp will still be chief adviser.

Harvard has by no means escaped severe losses. It should be noted, however, that the majority of Harvard's losses are on account of the new eligibility rules rather than the graduation of players. All told, Harvard must start the season minus five, and possibly six, of her best players. These are Knowlton and Leary, the two ends; Squires, tackle; Kersburg, a guard, and McCann, half-back. The sixth loss will be a thrill, unless he reverses his determination to quit the game because of its brutality. This will leave Harvard with the following men: Burr, at guard; Parker, at center; Barr, at quarter-back; Foster, at half-back, and Lockwood at full-back. In addition to these men Harvard will have a big substitute list from which to draw. The team will be coached once more by W. T. Reid, Jr. Although Reid has not been successful during the past two years, the fault lay not so much with his coaching as the inability of the players to do what he taught. Harvard has broken with Pennsylvania and the disposition of one of the hardest games on the schedule will make Harvard's year a much easier one.

GARMEN'S CLUB

The Rapid Transit boys are forming an Athletic Club and are to establish a gymnasium and have a regular meeting club. The boys are going to have their baseball and football teams and indulge in every kind of sport. There are many good husky lads in the employ of the Rapid Transit Co., and there is no reason why they should not make good.

A well equipped gym. would be a great thing for recreation for the boys, as working on the cars is hard on them.

DIAMOND HEADS BUSY

That hustling athletic club, known as the Diamond Heads, is getting busy these days and are fast making a name for themselves.

Last evening this club held a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. There were many members present and they showed much interest in the doings of the club. The club is looking forward to the coming events and have decided to enter into one new sport—swimming. When the Hotel Baths open they intend entering a swimming team that will make the other teams hustle. These lads have nothing but the best. Archie Robertson will look after this new departure of the club. E. Fernandez, the crack athlete, was chosen as manager of the basketball and association ball teams. A. K. Akana, the speedy runner, will have the track team in charge.

A big time is planned by the club for the next full moon. Every member will have his lady there and a good time is expected.

Ben Clark, E. Fernandez, E. June, S. Chillingworth and L. Petrie will get up the doings for the jinks.

SPORTING TIPS

Louis Soares, the H. A. C. catcher, departed on the Alameda for the Coast. Joy is next.

Commodore Cooper has followed in the footsteps of Admiral Beckley and has offered a cup to be raced for by second class yachts.

There will soon be two new second-class yachts in the harbor. James Jackson is importing a fast one from San Francisco.

The annual meeting of the Association football league tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Thistle Club. Officers will be elected for the coming season.

Work will soon start on the tennis courts at the Oahu Country Club. They will be double courts of the finest kind.

A cocker team from Camp McKinley may enter the league.

A junior football league is being formed.

The tank at the Hotel Baths is now being constructed.

The golf course at the Country Club has been cleared of brush.
